A WORD ABOUT SABLE

Sable fur is considered to be the world's king of fur. Back in the prime days of the Russian Monarchy this fur was known as the Crowned or Imperial Russian sable. Sable was given as an award for special achievements or as gifts to foreign guests and ambassadors. In the early twentieth century sable coat was worth as much as a nice house.

Nowadays expensive fur increasingly becomes a symbol of wealth and luxury, signifying the social status of the owner. High-quality fur products never lose its value and are always in great demand. In addition, modern entrepreneurs consider sable fur a great investment, and quite often sable coats are passed from generation to generation.

Sable fur is famous for being light weight, very dense, silky, tender, and sparkling, yet very warm and durable. Sable fur is amazingly beautiful and comes in wide variety of natural colors, ranging from yellow sand to black tar. Superiority and beauty of sable is determined by its tone and shade of gray. The darker the fur and the more silvery the gray, the more expensive the fur is. The black sable fur is considered the best and most beautiful. At the auctions the price for such fur can reach $700-$800 per skin whereas, in general, price for sable fur starts at around $30 per skin. Such sable is produced in very small amounts, they are as precious stones weighing several dozen carat - are practically single specimens. The main sable fur auction is St. Petersburg International fur auction "SOYUZPUSHNINA" held three times a year. If such samples of sable are presented there, they are presented only in limited numbers of 50 to 100 skins per year and are sold at a top dollar. It should be noted that amongst the tens of millions of furs annually produced in the world sable fur production is only 250 thousand skins a year. Therefore, selecting skins is the process no less important than choosing the color and the shade of gray.

Cost of a set that contains several dozens of skins of one tone grows significantly compared to a set of just several skins. Of course, we are talking about natural color of the sable. Consequently, sometimes it takes a few years to assemble a full collection of sable fur for presentation.

European Fashion Lines offers finest quality Russian sable fur skins and garments. We buy directly from "SOYUZPUSHNINA" auction in St. Petersburg. All sable fur is carefully selected by our experts to meet the highest quality standards and parameters such as color, size and cost. Then tailored into the perfect fit by our talented fashion designers and turned into a beautiful creation at our manufacturing facility using latest and most advanced technology.
